

Matt Kramer
Sunday Oregonian
June 1, 2008

Crucillon “Campo de Borja”
Grenache 2005, Bodegas Aragonesas

“You want to see how absurd today’s wine market is? This wine sells for $6.95 a bottle.

Crucillon is the name Bodegas Aragonesas gives to its non-oaked Grenache. It’s meant to be drunk young and slightly cool. Indeed, this 2005 bottling is just right at the moment: silky smooth, brimming with Grenache’s signature scent and taste of wild cherries, and ideal for anything from sunset sipping to summer fare, from picnic food to grilled meats and vegetables.

The $6.95 price is, of course, ridiculously unbeatable. Get it while you can.”